Read the following TEN COMMANDMENTS:

I. We are the only merchants who have always sold goods cheaper in Jackson than any goods on credit. II. Thou shalt not have the slightest doubt about the good qualities of our goods and the low prices of the same; for we buy of first hands, and pay the cash for all we bny.

WII. Thou shalt not commit wrong towards thy wife by buying for her a common article somewhere else, when thou canst get a better one of us at the same price. III. Thou shalt not take and read this advertisement in vain, for it thou wishest to have bargains, call on us first and thou wilt be more pleased than ever.

VIII. Thou shalt not steal thine own money out of thine own pocket, by paying high prices in other houses, when thou canst buy of us for a great deal less.

IV. Remember thy greenbacks and hard stuff, and keep it for us to thine own benefit; for six days in every week thou workest hard for it, thou, thy wife,; and thy children, thy horse, thy mule and thy ox; therefore we say unto thee, keep it for us, come to us, buy of us, and thou wilt save by doing so. IX. Thou shalt not bear false witness against V. Honor thy father and mother, brother and sister, and all thy friends, by sending them to us to purchase all they need, that they may live long on a little money for plenty of goods.

A flow shall not covet us for selling Dry Goods, Clothing, Hats, Boots and shoes, Fancy Articles and Notions, Queensware and Glass-ware Groceries and a thousand other things so low; for the farmer saves money, and the merchant will make enough by quick sales and small product.
